Employment History

- Jan 2026 - present  Senior Economist. Economic Innovation Group \(EIG\), Washington, D.C.
Lead research on labor markets, place-based policy, and retirement security, including evidence that Opportunity Zone designation increased new housing construction by 70 percent in designated tracts, adding more than 416,000 residential addresses, and estimates that about 76 million workers lack access to an employer-provided retirement plan. Authored short-form labor-market analysis documenting an approximately 20 percent increase in involuntary part-time employment between September and November 2025. Methods and data strengths: applied microeconomics, modern difference-in-differences, geospatial analysis, and large administrative datasets. Public outputs: bnglasner, EIG-Research, and Agglomerations.
